Let's think it through together!

1. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: next, first off, final moment. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

2. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: first stage, next, happily ever after. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

3. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: beginning, main part, happily ever after. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

4. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: first stage, ending, middle stage. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

5. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: start, the main event, happily ever after. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

6. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: middle, ending, first off. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

7. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: meanwhile, final stage, the lead-in. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

8. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: the main event, end, early part. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

9. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: early part, main action, wrap-up. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

10. A story has three parts. Put these story parts in the correct order: last bit, first off, the build-up. Write them in order (for example: beginning, middle, end).

You did it — great work!
