Let's think it through together!

1. What do we call each of these? (Separate your two answers with a comma.) 1) A chart with coloured bars showing how many students chose each favourite fruit. 2) A folded piece of paper showing streets, parks, and how to get to the school.

2. A drawing in an information book showing exactly how a caterpillar's legs look up close. What is the correct term for this?

3. A true-to-life picture taken with a camera showing the exact colours and details of a rainbow. What is the correct term for this?

4. What do we call each of these? (Separate your two answers with a comma.) 1) A tiny picture of a speaker that shows you where to press to hear the sound. 2) A true-to-life picture taken with a camera showing the exact colours and details of a rainbow.

5. A clip you watch on a screen that shows pictures moving and people talking. What do we call this?

6. A folded paper showing the layout of a zoo, with paths drawn between each animal enclosure. What is the correct term for this?

7. A picture in a picture book showing a dragon flying over a castle. What do we call this?

8. A drawing at the top of a chapter showing what the main character looks like. What do we call this?

9. A recording of a grandmother's voice telling a bedtime story that children can listen to at night. What is the correct term for this?

10. What do we call each of these? (Separate your two answers with a comma.) 1) A short word or phrase next to a picture telling you what that part is called. 2) A small picture, like a magnifying glass, that shows you where to click to search.

You did it — great work!
