1. A photo accompanying a food article is lit with warm light and shot close-up with shallow focus on the dish. What is this common style, used in most professional food photography, meant to do?

2. A disaster-relief appeal uses a photo lit in warm, golden light showing volunteers smiling while helping others. What effect is this lighting choice likely meant to create?

3. Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) A photo of a crowded refugee camp is cropped tightly to show only a handful of people in a clean, orderly space. What effect does this cropping have? 2) A political campaign photo is taken from a high angle looking down at the opposing candidate. What effect might this angle create? 3) A protest photo is taken from directly above (a bird's-eye view) to show the full size of the crowd. What is this angle typically used to emphasise?

4

Answer both (separate your two answers with a comma). 1) A historical photo has been colourised and slightly sharpened for a modern documentary. What is one risk of presenting an edited photo without noting the changes? 2) A photo accompanying a food article is lit with warm light and shot close-up with shallow focus on the dish. What is this common style, used in most professional food photography, meant to do?

5

Answer both (separate your two answers with a comma). 1) A wide-angle shot shows a single hiker dwarfed by towering mountains. What is this composition likely meant to emphasise? 2) A protest photo is taken from directly above (a bird's-eye view) to show the full size of the crowd. What is this angle typically used to emphasise?

6

Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) A product photo is staged with the item surrounded by lots of empty white space. What does this minimalist composition likely emphasise? 2) An environmental campaign photo shows a polar bear on a tiny, isolated ice floe. What effect is this composition likely meant to create? 3) A photo accompanying a food article is lit with warm light and shot close-up with shallow focus on the dish. What is this common style, used in most professional food photography, meant to do?

A real estate listing photo uses a wide-angle lens that makes a small room look much larger than it is. What problem does this illustrate?
