📖 The Missing Graphics Calculator, Found by School Librarian Near Art Studio

A student realised a graphics calculator had gone missing somewhere between first and third period. After retracing the morning's timetable without any luck, the student reported it at the front office just before lunch. Word eventually reached the school librarian, who recalled seeing something matching the description near the art studio earlier that day. Sure enough, a graphics calculator was found exactly there, tucked out of sight where it had been left behind. The student collected it before the final bell, relieved the item had turned up before the end of the day.

1. What went missing?

2. When did the student report it?

3. Who recalled seeing it?

4. Where was it found?

5 When did the student get it back?

6 Answer all three (separate with commas): what went missing, who recalled seeing it, and where was it found?
