ZiloAcademy

✨ Grade 8 English — Websites ✨

Name: Demo Date: 26/11/2026

1

Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) What is the term for the box on a webpage where users can type comments or reactions below an article? 2) If a website has not been updated in several years and still refers to outdated technology or events, should its current claims be trusted fully? 3) What term describes a small text box that appears when you click a button to confirm an action, like deleting a file?

2

Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) What is it called when a website automatically loads more content as you scroll down, without clicking to a new page? 2) What is it called when clicking a highlighted piece of text takes you to another page or website? 3) What is the short summary of a webpage's content shown underneath its title in search engine results called?

3

Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) Should a news website clearly separate its opinion/editorial pieces from its straight factual reporting? 2) If a website is selling a product and also "reviewing" that same product favourably, should readers trust the review fully? 3) Which is a stronger sign of a credible website: a '.gov' or '.edu' domain, or a domain with no listed author and no date?

4. Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) Should you trust a website's claims more if it displays contact details and a clearly named author? 2) What is the term for the box on a webpage where users can type comments or reactions below an article? 3) If a website's "About Us" page is missing or very vague about who runs it, is this a warning sign for credibility?

5. If a website is covered in pop-up ads and broken links, is this generally a sign of a trustworthy, well-maintained site?

6. Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) Should a reliable website clearly distinguish paid advertisements from its genuine editorial content? 2) What term describes a small text box that appears when you click a button to confirm an action, like deleting a file? 3) What is the short summary of a webpage's content shown underneath its title in search engine results called?

7. Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) What is the short URL shown in a search result or browser address bar, used to identify a specific website, called? 2) If a website has not been updated in several years and still refers to outdated technology or events, should its current claims be trusted fully? 3) If a website is selling a product and also "reviewing" that same product favourably, should readers trust the review fully?

8

Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) What is the short summary of a webpage's content shown underneath its title in search engine results called? 2) What is the small icon shown in a browser tab that represents a website's brand, usually next to its title? 3) Should you trust a website's claims more if it displays contact details and a clearly named author?

9

What is the term for a list of a website's pages that helps search engines (and sometimes users) find every page on the site?

10

Answer all three (separate with commas). 1) Which is a stronger sign of a credible website: a '.gov' or '.edu' domain, or a domain with no listed author and no date? 2) If a website is selling a product and also "reviewing" that same product favourably, should readers trust the review fully? 3) If a website is covered in pop-up ads and broken links, is this generally a sign of a trustworthy, well-maintained site?